Celebrating 20 years at OTS

by Krista P. Lear

In 1976 the Seminary welcomed 42 men and women on campus. This September it anticipates an enrollment of just under 600. To celebrate 20 years of God's provision of preparing leaders for the Church, the Seminary plans a year of events.

The school that borrowed rooms from the College until its building was ready in January 1977, doubled its space in 1992. With more classrooms available, OTS offered more courses. With new lounges, students had more opportunity to connect. Everyone welcomed the enclosed walkway connecting the Sem to the library, dining room and business office. Remember those winter storms?

Leadership proved steady and visionary. Prior to 1976 a team headed by Executive Vice-President William Foster had established a strong foundation in philosophy and curriculum. Roy Matteson served as first dean until 1981, when Ian Rennie came on board after Mariano Di Gangi held the reins as interim dean. W. Ward Gasque is now at the helm.

And the Seminary remains progressive. The MTS degree has been reworked to allow foci in Chinese studies, missiology, worship, youth, and in-depth studies in NT.

That day,

noted South African strategist, conciliator and evangelist Michael Cassidy will speak morning and evening on "A Leadership

OT and Theology. It has also been repackaged in a modular format so that working professionals can complete the program without giving up their evening time.

Celebrations planned

The first public celebration is scheduled for November 1, when the leadership example of a humanitarian and former board member will be honoured.

Strategic Plan calls for a new name

Discussions regarding a name change for OBC first began in 1988. In 1994, the Board of Governors voted to proceed with these discussions. Since then, further dialogue at the board and faculty levels have more clearly identified the nature of the ministry of OBC. With approval of the Strategic Plan this summer, the board agreed to proceed with the search for a new name for the entire institution.

This move flows out of the Strategic Plan which calls for an expansion of the ministry beyond the college and seminary to include life-long learning centres. These centres will serve important areas such as missions, pastoral leadership and preaching, to name just a few. With this new development, it was realized having a name such as Ontario Bible College / Ontario Theological Seminary - which speaks only of a college and seminary - would no longer speak for this larger spiritual enterprise that will essentially have three, not two, primary centres of learning. To stay with the cumbersome OBC/OTS name would no longer serve the long-term vision, nor would it be helpful in clearly describing to students, other universities and the public our heartbeat of serving Jesus Christ here in Canada and around the world.

As well, the use of a regional name may work at cross-purposes here in Canada. With Ontario as the largest province, using that as part of the primary name may be

A Leadership Led by God

The first of the planned annual Samuel R. Bernardo Leadership Lecture series will take place at the OBC/OTS campus November 6.

Michael Cassidy, world-renowned racial reconciler from South Africa, will be the guest speaker for both lectures on the topic of, "A Leadership Led by God." Cassidy's impressive ministry includes the organization of South Africa's first inter-racial Christian conference in 1974, where 800 delegates from most of the country's denominations joined to amend political, racial, geographical and denominational barriers. In 1983, the Anglican Church admitted Cassidy to the Order of Simon the Cyrene, the highest award given to a layman for distinguished Christian service.

The same year F.W. de Klerk became president (in 1990), Cassidy helped organize a conference for 230 Christian leaders. Delegates there witnessed the first public apology made by the white Dutch Reformed Church to all those who had been oppressed by apartheid. His reconciliation work has been steadfast over the years and continues in the form of book writing, conference organizing and guest speaking.

This series is made possible through the generosity of the late Samuel R. Bernardo, a tireless humanitarian and philanthropist who recognized the growing need for people of integrity to head industries, institutions and organizations around the world to ensure ethical decision making. THEY'RE BACK...

The ladies from London have done it again! Shortly after classes let out in the spring, seven faithful stewards—Aileen Wood, Doris Triffin, Grace Archer, Grace Kemp, Joyce Hatch, Katherine Harris and Sally Suchard of the London Ladies' Auxiliary—arrived on campus with mopis, pails and towels. Their visit was like a breath of fresh air as they left behind gleaming surfaces, shiny windows and overflowing flowerbeds. The history behind the school's affiliation with the London Auxiliary dates back to 1967 when the London College of Bible and Missions and Toronto Bible College

What it means

Historically, Bible colleges have been schools in which pastors, missionaries, and Christian workers are trained. This certainly has been the case for OBC. For the most part, the emphasis has been on terminal ministry training.

During the past decade or so, much of this training and equipping for professional full-time ministry has become more of the mainstay of a seminary. As a result, the Bible college movement has been going through an identity crisis.

OBC has not been exempt from this experience. While it continues to play a key role in preparing people for a variety of Christian ministries, the educational focus is foundational and preparatory in nature rather than terminal. Furthermore, it has broadened its definition of ministry to also include the varied needs of those in lay ministry and the marketplace, as well as those desirous of pursuing further education at universities and seminaries.

As more of our young people desire university education in preparation for their vocational life, it is interesting to note that an increasing number are taking part of their university undergraduate classes at OBC. For these students, it is vital that their credits are transferable to other institutions. However, many universities, organizations and government departments simply will not recognize "Bible college" degrees.

Using the term "Bible college" with its traditional understanding conveys an inadequate perception, making it difficult for students to use their years of study as a basis for further education. For many students and their parents who wish for the best possible education, the term suggests an education which is not viewed by some as being of stellar quality. Regardless of the many innovations OBC has incorporated during recent years, this image prevails.

Increasingly, young people are

Celebration to Crisis to Crossroads to Opportunity

STRATEGIC PLANNING UPDATE

In one swift year, centennial celebrations of OBC/OTS turned to crisis as the schools reached the thresholds of financial collapse. But in the providence of God, crisis became the catalyst in forcing the schools to take a fresh look at themselves, and to begin the process of fashioning a vision that will take them well into the new millennium.

In this climate of transition, as the process to develop a new vision began, two things became clear. The mission that the founders had articulated so clearly had not changed. Today, OBC/OTS continues to educate and equip Christians to serve the world with passion for Jesus Christ. This is, and will continue to be, the mission as the schools move away from the crossroads and into the future.

The vision casting process has been

Dear friends,

There is nothing as critical to the church and thus to a college and seminary like OBC/OTS as our foundational beliefs. They form the base on which we build. As goes the foundation, so goes the building.

For me this is fundamental and it is why I am so committed to a long term building of this ministry. For at our base is a rock-solid biblical foundation. A friend asked me if the theology of the college and seminary had in any way shifted from the historic evangelical position. In reviewing again the Statement of Faith, I'm thrilled by its language and strongly affirm since the beginning of Faith, I've affirmed for centuries, especially and profoundly, what, as evangelicals, we have affirmed from ever, we are deeply and proudly anchored in a biblical vision which begins with a commitment to Protestant Reformation. Indeed, more than ever, we are deeply and proudly anchored in a biblical vision which begins with a commitment to the Bible as God's Word. There is no judging here.

Critical to an evangelical theology is its Christ-centredness. We know history, founded on biblical liberation often begins with a slightly watered-down understanding. However, take a read of our Statement of Faith, the only Christ-centric held into the center of Jesus Christ as God's Son, the only Savior of humankind. (Please take a moment to read the Statement of Faith.)

As I sought the Lord for His leading this past spring, my appreciation for the college and seminary grew as I understood its great history. Praise the beginning, it kept with the biblical essentials. Through the twentieth century, it avoided the pitfalls and radical swings of religious ideas. Praise God for the wise leaders who held to an historic, trans-denominational evangelical theology.

As we begin to build this year, what I believe will be an exciting and world-reaching ministry, I pledge to you a "saying the course." We are informed by the Bible — God's Word, we are rooted in the life of Jesus Christ our Lord, and illumined and led by the Holy Spirit of God. From that there will be no wavering.

Sincerely,

Brian C. Suller

Goforth Leaves Rich Legacy to OBC/OTS

Goforth Ministries has generously donated historical material and publication rights to Jonathan Goforth's original writings to the school. Goforth (1859-1936) was a missionary statesman and risk-taker for Christ. He evangelized across China and Manchuria and was very influential in Korea, where he led church revivals at Presbyterian churches between 1915-1925. Chancellor William McRae was instrumental in negotiating this agreement with the estate of Mary Goforth Moyman, daughter of Jonathan. Among the items donated to OBC/OTS is a replica of a sword used in a triple execution attempt on Mr. Goforth, which will be displayed in the Hall of Mission.

one of the most comprehensive undertakings in the history of the schools. In order to understand more fully the changing needs of the schools' stakeholders, a Strategic Planning Committee was formed under John Wilkinson.

The immediate task was to embark on an information gathering process to allow these constituencies to share their insights, critiques, and dreams for the school of the future. In the process, OBC/OTS — a vision that will place the institution on the forefront of theological education.

The committee's broader mandate is developing a long-range strategic plan for implementing the necessary structural, educational, and operational changes to embrace the new realities that are part of this new vision. To give focused leadership to this process, Wilkinson was appointed by the Board of Governors as Vice-President of Strategic Planning and Institutional Change.

Wilkinson Appointed Head of Strategic Planning Process:

OBC/OTS are pleased to announce the appointment of Dr. John H. Wilkinson, Ed.D., to Vice President of Strategic Planning and Institutional Change. In addition to this role, Wilkinson will also serve as Vice President and Academic Dean of OBC and Chair of Academic and Student Affairs Council of the Cabinet.

Wilkinson has been a professor at the schools for over 20 years and remains interested in and committed to supporting youth ministry whenever possible. President Brian C. Suller, who has worked with Wilkinson for 25 years, says that his colleague is a visionary manager. "John is especially suited to provide us with leadership during this critical period."

With the "vision casting process" well in hand, the committee's next task is to create a blueprint for introducing new academic, personal and ministry formation, and life-long learning paradigms that will position the schools on the forefront of educational and academic excellence.

President Brian Suller and Wilkinson will be guiding the schools and the various departments through this planning process, with the end goal of a detailed five-year strategic action plan in place by April 1997.

In his book, Visionary Leadership, Peter Vail writes, "If the mission is the words, the vision is the music." May the music of our vision that we orchestrate together in the days ahead be a song of renewal and inspiration as we live out our mission with divine passion.

SOME THINGS DON'T CHANGE

Twenty years ago Roy Matheson wrote that the group entering the new Seminary in September 1976, "will face even greater challenge than those who came in 1894. They will serve in an over-crowded, polluted world and minister to people who are unconsciously manipulated by the mass media. They face unique ethical problems brought by recent advances in science, technology and medicine. It is imperative that the training of Christian leaders keep pace with contemporary needs."

Did You Know?

by Larry Willard, V.P. of Development

"I had no idea!" is the usual response I get when I tell students that their tuition fees cover about 60% of what it actually costs for their education. The other 40% is subsidized by the school's friends, alumni, and supporting churches. For example, the average student will pay from $5,500 for a one-year program to $16,000 for a three-year Masters degree. The latter actually carries a price tag of $26,000, which means over $3,000 of subsidy a year is needed per student. Many students cannot carry the full burden of their education, and the school understands this. That is why we rely on God's people to become partners in this ministry. Being a transdenominational school means that we do not receive funds on a regular basis from denominational sources, so we depend on gifts from people following God's prompting.

The sad truth is, Christians are overwhelmed by the flood of evils in society. So now, more than at any other time in history, we need well-prepared dynamic Christian leadership who will take on these forces. Here at OBC/OTS, we have the means to prepare men and women for the battle. Our future is bright and inspiring, but we urgently need the help of our friends who have the same vision we do to reverse these trends. In order to do so, however, the school needs to raise $2 million this year, to cover the costs of our work.

In our vision we also see every student graduating from our school without a debt load that forces them to accept secular employment to pay off large student loans. We are already working toward a plan that would see additional scholarships, bursaries and endowments to help all students who need financial help. We are thankful for our current partners, who are the most important part of our vision to be a powerful Christian influence on Canada, and the rest of the world. But we need many more to join us. We do have faith in God's provision, but we understand that He works through people like our supporters.

There are a number of ways our supporters can be more involved with the school's mission.

► If you have never sent a gift, sending a small contribution of $25, $50 or $100

40% of a student's education is subsidized by donations from OBC/OTS friends, alumni and churches would go a long way to restoring our finances if everyone participates. The schools have 7,500 alumni who have benefited immensely from past support of their education but unfortunately, many alumni don't keep in touch. We want to challenge our alumni who have not supported us since they left the school to help us train new leaders for God's work.

► Get your church or friends together to sponsor a student. You can help a full time student for a donation of $3,000 per year. If you can't afford this, support one for a single semester ($1,500).

► You can give through one of our planned giving options. Trust funds, memorial gifts, annuities and gift-in-kind programs all have advantageous tax breaks. Ask for our booklet on these great opportunities.

We need to raise $2 million this year to cover the costs of our work ► Volunteering time at the school, to assist with various activities. Helpers are always appreciated, and your gifts and talents can be used in a number of areas.

Letter From a Friend

When I first went to OBC in the fall of 1972, I was practically biblically illiterate. I received good training at OBC and became more established in prayer and Bible study. The strong emphasis on missions at OBC at the time gave me a compelling desire to reach out with the gospel. The mentoring of men like Bob Duez and Brian Roe had a tremendous impact upon my life as I watched these men as they walked with God. I'm thankful for the ministry of OBC in my life. God bless you all as you seek to train a whole new generation of men and women for the cause of Christ.

Because of Calvary,

From Iran and Islam to Canada and Christianity

by Laurie Chong

Fariborz Khandani is a polymath and he's not ashamed to admit it.

"I always sit in the front row during class because I love learning. I'm thirsty for knowledge," says the third-year OBC student. He is also an active Christian and isn't ashamed to admit that, either. Not that this was always easy to do.

Born and raised in Shiraz, Iran, Fariborz lived in a country where constitutional rights to Christians only exist on paper.

Ironically, he became a Christian while trying to dissuade his newly converted sister.

"When my oldest sister went to university, she was in contact with Christians. According to Islamic laws, apostasy—leaving your faith—is a sin punishable by death. So I read the Bible, trying to convince my sister to leave Christianity. But it backfired because reading it converted me," laughs Fariborz, remembering that cool summer night when he was 16.

Conversions such as these usually bring disgrace to Islamic parents, who

LANGUAGE PROGRAM

One of the best features of OBC's student body is its diversity in cultural backgrounds. With this aspect, however, comes the need to help students with their command of the English language. In September, OBC will be introducing a language and writing program, designed to ensure that students have college-level English skills.

All incoming students will take the Language and Writing Diagnostic Test before registration. Depending on the score achieved, students are placed in one of three programs—a Writing/Library Workshop, introduction to College Essay Writing or English for Academic Purposes.

The length of each program varies. Please contact Elizabeth Davey for more information at (416) 226-6380, ext. 6713.

also fear for their child's safety. But Fariborz couldn't believe otherwise. Jesus is too real to him.

In 1985, Fariborz tried to leave Iran but was caught at the border. He was sent to prison and it was there his spirit was broken. He denied his faith to guards to escape torture. But upon doing so, he was miserable and knew he needed to fix his relationship with God. He lived one day at a time there. When he was released, he renewed his commitment to God. After serving in the army for 28 months, he went to Cyprus, claiming religious asylum. Four years later, in 1992, he came to Toronto and attended Wycliffe College. In January 1994, he enrolled at OBC. Presently, he is volunteering his time, serving as an assistant pastor at the Iranian Church of Toronto. When Fariborz finishes at OBC, he'd like to go to OTS, and eventually work in the areas of ministering, research, writing, teaching and translating. In fact, it was in the latter area that the Bible really came alive to him.

"I was translating Mark 6:39. When Jesus fed 5,000. He told the crowd to sit on the green grass. The description of color was a touch of reality to me. Legends don't have this kind of detail. Mark was not making a story up. He was telling the story as it really happened," explains Fariborz.

Fariborz's time at OBC has been the best of his life, and he hopes to have many more happy years, learning and serving.

A few years ago, a friend nicknamed him Fozy Bear, after the comical, bad joke-telling Muppet character. The similarities, according to Fariborz, lie in the physique and curly hair. But unlike the Muppet, this is one individual to take seriously.

"Moving in ... In just a few short weeks this scene will be repeated for many of our new students. Please pray for them as they prepare to leave home to join the OBC/OTS community."

From Victim to Victor

by Laurie Chong

In Acts 20:24, Paul says that his life is worth nothing unless he finishes the race God has planned for him. For Sijane Tijarardja, he not only plans to do as Paul did, but also plans on winning. Winning souls, that is.

"I want to travel the world to tell people about God's goodness," says 37-year-old Sijane. Sijane graduated from OTS in May 1996, with a Master of Divinity in Counseling. Although she completed her degree in just three and a half years, her road to graduation wasn't an easy one.

After getting married in 1989 to an Indonesian-Canadian in her native Indonesia, Sijane moved to Canada with her husband, leaving a successful career, her own home and her loving Christian family. The couple had plans to go to China as missionaries, and they were happy. But two months later, he made a 180 degree turn. He denied his faith, became abusive and gave Sijane an ulterior - choose him or God. Either road led to divorce but the former meant landed immigrant sponsorship. With a step of faith, Sijane chose the only Way. She received many tears and saying many prayers. Around the same time, Sijane was reminded that back in 1986, God called her to be a minister. After renewing this commitment, her healing began. God put people in her life that helped her with housing, immigration and jobs. One of these people was Dr. P.G. Sostopang, a pastor from Vancouver. He introduced Sijane to her present church, the Indonesian Christian Church. She began working there as the secretary in February 1991.

In 1992, Sijane applied to OTS, trusting that God would provide (verses dear to her include 1 Thess. 5:24 and Prov. 3:5-6), as her financial situation reflected other wise. Through a surprise inheritance, student loans and volunteers to help with her English, Sijane was able to overcome these barriers. She had a fulfilling internship as a student chaplain at Etobicoke General Hospital. Her time at OTS allowed her to heal and build relationships with caring staff and peers.

The new Master of Theological Studies modular program is being launched in September. Designed for people presently employed in full-time careers, students will have one four-hour class once a week. This program allows students to complete their degrees in just two and a half years. "Our new program will enable OTS to extend their reach of its mission to equip workers by making a program accessible to more people," says Mr. Jeffrey Greenman, director of the MTS modular program. This will allow students to build a strong rapport with classmates, as they will be with the group throughout the two and a half years.

On a related note, OTS is delighted to welcome Greenman, a doctoral candidate in religious studies at the University of Virginia, as director of this new modular program. His leadership abilities are reflected in his time at the U of Virginia, where he served as a teaching assistant in Theology, Ethics and Medicine, and Religious Ethics and Moral Problems classes.

At the end of July, Sijane left for Hong Kong and from there, will go to China, Vietnam and Australia. She plans to work with Chinese-Indonesians and Chinese locals. By January 1997, she will be back in Toronto.

"I need to find a job to pay off my student loan," explains Sijane with a laugh. Her goals for the next five years include to be ordained, complete an ESL teaching certificate and taking courses with the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy.

One of Sijane's childhood dreams was to travel the world, working as a flight attendant. Now, in God's predetermined way, she is doing exactly what she dreamt - serving people while overseas.

Faculty and Staff Notes

OTS welcomes Dr. Nancy Calvert-Koyzis to their staff in September as a New Testament professor. Calvert-Koyzis is a former assistant professor of New Testament studies at Wheaton College in Illinois. Her Ph.D. is from the University of Sheffield in England, whose Press will publish her dissertation on the traditions concerning Abraham in Galatians and Romans. Calvert-Koyzis is ordained in the Presbyterian Church (USA).

of Church History for the period of 1996-1997.

Dr. John Franklin's main motivation for pursuing and maintaining a career as an OBC professor (since 1972) is the opportunity to teach and learn from students. "Many of us who have been raised in a Christian context are taught to fear learning, particularly critical thinking," says Franklin. Dealing with that fear has been pivotal in his teaching. Over the past academic year, he served as acting dean of OBC, where he used his leadership skills to face new tasks and challenges. In September 1996, Franklin will resume his post as professor of philosophy at the college. Thank you for your long and fruitful service, John!

Paul Friesen, M.Div., Th.M., professor of history at OBC, was recently named Vice-President of the Canadian Society of Church History for the period of 1996-1997.
